

I am valued by my community.

How do we tell our children we welcome and include them in our community life?

A community demonstrates children are valuable resources by investing in a child-rearing system of family support and high quality activities and resources. This means that regardless of your organization, mandate, funding, or job function, you proactively partner with others because you cherish and value our young children and their families. You take action to ensure our children's health and safety.

How well we support the physical, social, emotional, and spiritual needs of our children today affects how they relate to our community tomorrow. We all help our children to grow up healthy, caring, and responsible – a solid investment for our communities.

WHAT'S BEST FOR OUR KIDS

Investing in them as a valuable resource